Best Practices for IMA Member Organizations - Ministry, Leadership & Management

Preamble

India missions Association (IMA) in the early years of its formation worked out a comity agreement for members to adhere to. This was a pre-condition to IMA membership. The expansion of IMA members and the changed mission context presented the need to have a fresh look at the same document and also to go beyond comity agreement by adopting best practices applicable for all IMA members. Hence the Best Practices for IMA members may be described as a set of values, ethos and principles aimed at guiding the inter organization and intra organization relationships.

Best Practices are bench marks or goals towards which we corporately strive for the glory of God. Mission organizations and churches are not just focused on the results but the means we use to achieve the results. We need to go beyond the best practices and adopt common programs in partnership with one another. Excellence in ministry, leadership & management practices brings glory to God.

The first draft of this document was presented at the IMA Executive Committee meeting in August 2003 and circulated for suggestions to all IMA members during December 2003. The draft was then discussed during the open house discussions at the IMA National Conference held in Hyderabad from 24th to 27th June 2004. All the suggestions were incorporated and the document was adopted with the full consent of the participants present on 26th June 2004 and was brought into immediate effect for all IMA members to strive forward with God’s help.

Scope of Application: The Best Practices for IMA members applies to all the present member organizations who may be societies, trusts, churches, institutions, networks, agencies, para-church organizations etc., and all others when they become members in future.
